Combining people listed twice

What to do when the same person shows up on the members list twice.

Sometimes the same person ends up with two records on the board website. It usually happens like this: a member is on the club roster, but the club didn't have their email. When they sign up on the website, the site can't tell it's them, so it starts a second, brand-new record. That second record shows them as a Non-member, which isn't right.

The website now spots these for you. Your job is just to look and say yes or no.

> How the website spots them
> Two records with the same last name and the same phone number are flagged as possibly the same person.

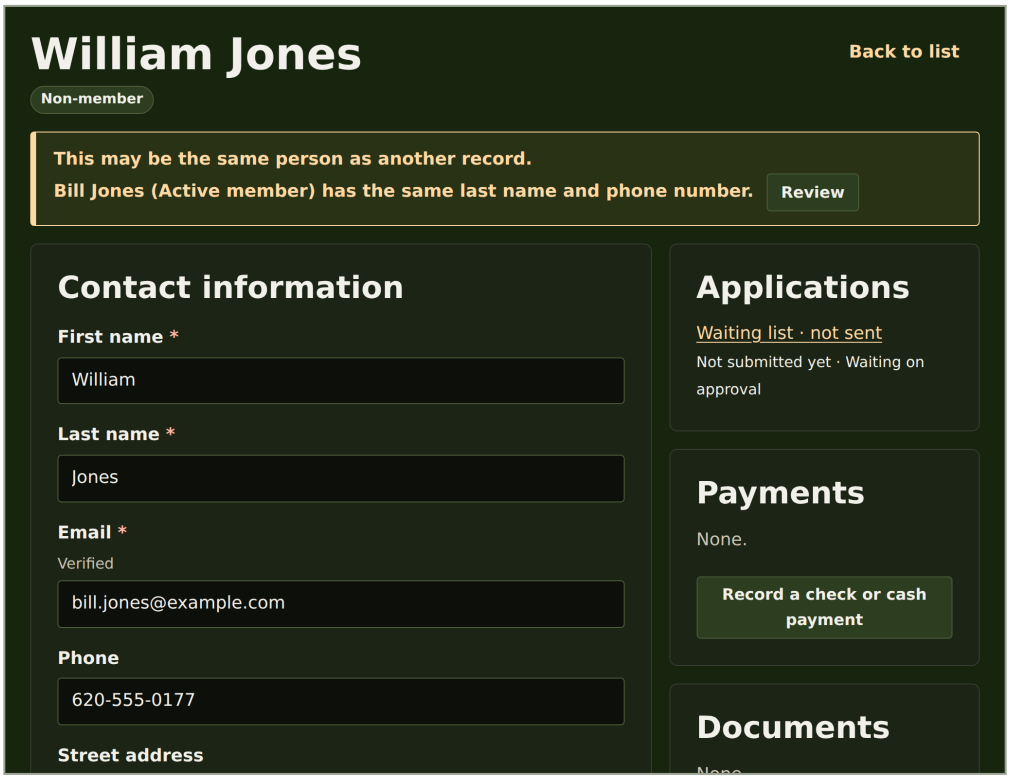

Where you'll see it

1. Sign in to the board website and click Members & contacts in the menu on the left. If anyone may be listed twice, a yellow box appears at the top of the page.

The yellow box lists each pair, with a Review button.

2 You'll also see a yellow box at the top of either person's own page.

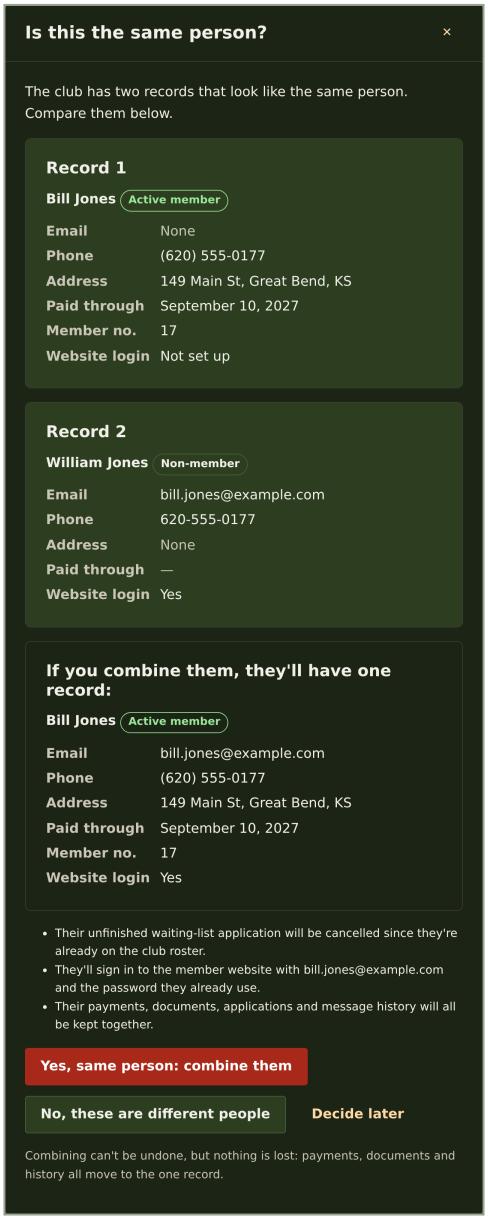

The same warning on William Jones's page.

Deciding: same person or not?

3 Click Review. A window opens showing both records side by side, and what the single record will look like if you combine them.

4 Compare the two. Ask yourself: is this the same person? Look at the name (Bill and William), the address and the email. Read the short list under If you combine them: it says what will happen.

The Review window. The buttons are at the bottom.

5 Click one of the three buttons:

Button	When to use it	What happens
Yes, same person: combine them	It's the same person.	The two records become one. Nothing is lost: payments, documents, applications and messages all move to the one record. If they made a website login, it keeps working.
No, these are different people	Two real people, for example a husband and wife who share a home phone.	Nothing changes, and the pair won't be flagged again.
Decide later	You're not sure yet.	Nothing changes. The yellow box stays until someone decides.

6 After combining, a green message confirms it, and the person appears once in the list.

"Done. Bill Jones now has one record."

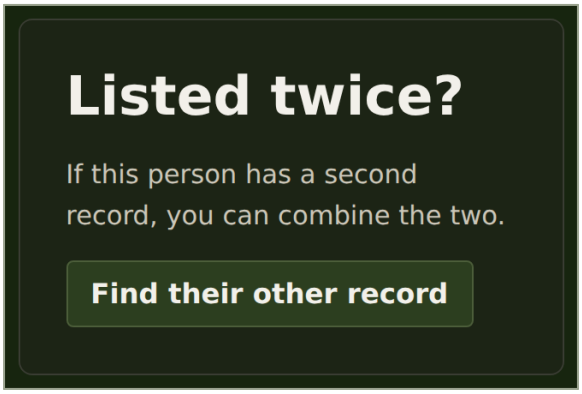

Good to know

- Combining can't be undone. If you're not sure, choose Decide later and ask another board member.
- The website picks which record to keep for you: the one that's further along with the club (the roster member). Any missing details are filled in from the other record.
- If the two records have different emails, phone numbers or addresses, the window tells you which one won't be kept. You can fix it on their page afterwards.
- If their only application was an unfinished waiting-list form, it's cancelled automatically, since they're already a member.

When the website doesn't spot it

If someone's two records have different phone numbers, the website won't notice. You can still combine them by hand.

7 Open one of their records. In the Listed twice? box, click Find their other record.

8 Type their name, email or phone number, then click their other record in the list. The same Review window opens, and you choose as before.

If it says "These can't be combined yet"

- Both records have a board sign-in: ask the president or technology admin to remove one under Board users first.
- Both have an application in progress: approve, decline or finish one of them first, then try again.

Why this also matters for the waiting list

While a person is flagged as possibly being a roster member, the website won't let them apply for the waiting list. Instead it asks them to contact the board. Once you combine the records, they can renew as a member instead. If you choose No, these are different people, they're free to apply.
