Updating a member

How to change someone's details on their record.

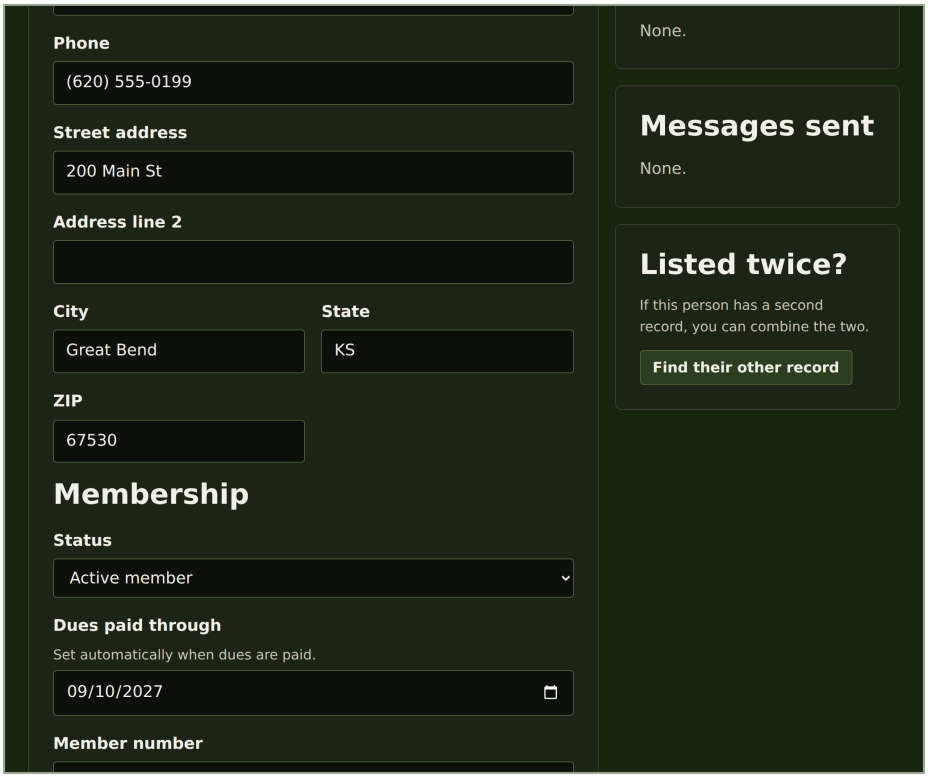

Each person has their own page where you can see and change their details: contact information, membership, NRA and messages. Their applications, payments, documents and the messages they've been sent are listed on the right.

Changing someone's details

1 Find the person (see the guide Finding a member) and click their name to open their page.

2 Click in any box and type the new information. For example, add their street address, city, state and ZIP.

3 Scroll down and click Save changes. Nothing is saved until you click this.

4 A green Saved. message appears at the top of the form.

What each part means

Section	What's in it
Contact information	Name, email, phone and mailing address.
Membership	Their status (see below), the date their dues are paid through, their member number, and whether they're on the board or shooting committee.
Approvals	NRA number and expiration date, NRA life member, and whether a background check has cleared.
Messages	Whether it's OK to send them text messages, and whether they've unsubscribed from club emails.
Board notes	Private notes for the board. Members never see these.

Membership status

Status	Meaning
Active member	A current, paid-up member.
Waiting list	Applied to join and is waiting for a spot.
Non-member	A contact who isn't a member. New website sign-ups start here.
Expired	Their membership ran out because dues weren't paid.
Terminated	Their membership was ended by the board.

Good to know

- Dues paid through fills in by itself when someone pays, online or when a check or cash payment is recorded. You rarely need to change it by hand.
- Changing an email: the new address shows as Not verified until the person confirms it. An email can be changed but not removed.
- Text messages: only check OK to send text messages if the person told you they want texts.
- NRA membership is current turns off by itself when their NRA expiration date passes.
- Every change is recorded with your name in the activity log.

Is this person listed twice?

If a yellow "may be the same person" box appears at the top of their page, see the guide Combining people listed twice.
